Foreword

Although the legal age of marriage is set at 18 years, Malawi continues to register persistently high rates of child marriage: 38 in every 100 girls under 18 years get married in Malawi. At a global scale, Malawi has the 14th highest prevalence of child marriage in Africa and the fourth-highest child marriage prevalence in East and Southern Africa. Child marriage affects both girls and boys, but it affects girls disproportionately: only 7 % of the boys get married before the age of 18 while for girls, it is higher at 38 %. Child marriage is driven by poverty, prevailing social and cultural norms, low education levels, teenage pregnancy and sexual exploitation, peer pressure and limited enforcement of child-related laws. Child marriage is one of the critical factors that limit the chances of Malawi achieving her full human capital potential and contribute to economic development. The country cannot afford to let this status quo continue. The National Strategy on Ending Child Marriage in Malawi (NSECM) underlines the commitment of the Government and its partners to intensify their efforts towards having a Malawi free of child marriage. This Strategy provides a situation analysis and extent of the problem of child marriage in Malawi, its driving factors, and consequences. It further outlines the strategic focus areas of interventions and the key milestones to be achieved by 2030.

The development of this strategy has come at an opportune time and within the context of Malawi 2063 First 10-Year Implementation Plan (MW2063 and MIP 1), particularly Enabler 5, referring to Human Capital Development. The NSECM will also operationalize the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act and provisions of national policies related to children, youth, and gender. It is also linked to regional and global commitments, including the SADC Model Law, the African Union Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC).

The strategy has been developed through a participatory consultative process involving stakeholders at national, district and community levels involving government Ministries, Departments and Agencies (MDAs), Civil Society Organisations (CSOs), and academia as a reflection of joint commitment to eliminate child marriages in Malawi. I would like to specifically mention USAID through Palladium PROPEL Health who played a pivotal role from the very beginning by providing financial and technical support. In addition, some UN agencies also took part by providing technical support during the review of the initial drafts and further guiding the process to ensure the strategy is aligned to the national, continental, global instruments on children and ending child marriage.

I therefore call upon all stakeholders to commit to the implementation of the Strategy. On its part, the Government through the Ministry of Gender, Community Development and Social Welfare (MoGCDSW), will provide the needed policy guidance and oversight, coordination and leadership, and resource mobilization necessary to push the agenda forward and ensure that NSECM is effectively implemented. We are also committed to strengthening strategic partnerships with non-state actors within the civil society, private sector, donor community and development partners who are engaged in the fight against child marriage.

Acknowledgements

The strategy is a product of close collaboration and participation amongst a wide range of stakeholders, including government MDAs, CSOs, academia and development partners in child protection. The Government of Malawi (GoM) commits to providing leadership in policy coordination, partner and resource mobilisation, monitoring, evaluation and reporting on NSECM. Our success in the implementation of the strategy will depend on the leadership of Government and its commitment in collaboration with stakeholders. In this respect, a fervent call is being made to all partners at national, district and community levels to take the NSECM seriously and implement the activities detailed in the strategy with diligence and urgency to end child marriages.

The development of this Strategy has been a long and participatory process involving an extensive review of relevant policies and documents on child marriage from the MDAs, civil society organizations (CSOs) and UN agencies. The insightful input from all the partners and stakeholders has been critical throughout the strategy development process. The Ministry of Gender, Community Development and Social Welfare (MoGCDSW) is therefore grateful for the technical and financial support from all partners that made the development of this Strategy a reality.

Further, appreciation is extended to members of the Task Force and officers in the Departments of Child Affairs and Planning and Research in the MoGCDSW, who all showed great commitment to the development of the strategy. I would also like to recognize the financial support towards national task force consultations from UNDP, Firelight Foundation, Plan International, Save the Children International, Oxfam, WoRLEC, CEYECE, and AMREF Tikweze Umoyo. All district and community members in Chikwawa, Mangochi, Zomba and Mzimba deserve special recognition for sparing their time to participate as key informants and in focus group discussants during the triangulation sessions of the process.

We also wish in a special way to express our gratitude to Dr. Benjamin Kaneka, the consultant, for facilitating the strategy's development process.

The collaborative and participatory spirit demonstrated during the development of NSECM should continue during the implementation so that the goal of ending child marriage by 2030 is achieved.

Introduction

The National Strategy on Ending Child Marriage (2024 - 2030) has been developed through a consultative process that builds on the successes of the previous strategy, and addresses gaps noted during implementation and reviews processes. The implementation of the National Strategy on Ending Child Marriage (2019 - 2023) registered a number of achievement but the key milestones include the review of the penal code and other safeguarding policies and the strengthening of the community structures such as mother groups, Community Victim Support Unit and Chiefs Forums. These milestones have greatly contributed to the reduction in the prevalence of child marriages from 42% Malawi Demographic Health Survey (MDHS, 2015) in 2015 to 37.7% in 2020 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS, 2020). This strategy is guided by global, continental, and regional instruments and protocols; and systems that ensure a comprehensive and inclusive approach to eradicating child marriage in Malawi. It is also aligned to the Malawi 2063 First Ten (10) Year Implementation Plan (MIP-1).

1.1 Situation Analysis

1.1.1 Prevalence of Child Marriage

Child marriage is defined as any formal marriage or informal union between a child under the age of 18 and an adult or another child (UNICEF, 1989); and is a global problem with 15 million children married every year before reaching the age of 18 (UNICEF, 2016). Child marriage threatens rights of children to education, protection, health, and civic participation that are detrimental to overall national development.

Malawi has one of the highest rates of child marriages in the world with a prevalence of 38% of the women aged 20-24 being married before the age of 18 years (MICS, 2021). This represents a decrease in child marriage among females as in 2015/16 it was at 43% (MDHS National Statistical Office, 2017) and it was at 49.9% in 2013/2014 (National Statistical Office, 2014). Eight percent (8%) of the females get married before the age of 15. Only 7% of the boys get married before the age of 18 (MICS, 2021) and this represents a marginal decline from 2015/2016 when it was at 6% (National Statistical Office, 2017). The prevalence of child marriage in Malawi is higher than the average in Sub-Saharan Africa (SSA) which is at 31% for females who get married by the age of 18 years. Only 4% of the males are married by the age of 18 years in SSA (UNICEF, 2023) compared to 7% in Malawi. Child marriage is more prevalent in rural areas where 46% of women aged 20-24 get married before the age of 18 compared to 32% of women of this age group in urban areas (National Statistical Office, 2021). Soon after the launch of the NSECM in 2019 there was an increase in the number of cases of child marriage in Malawi and this was mainly due to the public awareness campaigns but also the COVID-19 epidemic (MoGCDSW, 2022).

1.1.2 Drivers of Child Marriage

1.1.2.1 Poverty

Forty Eight percent of the child population in Malawi is multidimensionally and monetary poor (Child Multi-Dimensional Poverty Report, 2023). Child marriages reduce the economic burden for providing for adolescent girls in the households and therefore are regarded as a motivation factor for parents and girls to get into such marriages (Journal of Adolescent Girls, 2021). In matrimonial communities, the son in law relocates to the girls homestead and support the girl's family in kind (cultivating the fields) or cash. On the cultural perspective, the family would be motivated to get the cattle (bride wealth) paid for the bride to uplift themselves out of poverty or to pay for her brother's bride wealth.

1.1.2.2 Harmful Practices and Traditions

A 2019 University of Zurich study corroborates the earlier findings by the 2006 Malawi Human Rights Commission report. Both reports highlight practices including "kupimbira"—marrying off daughters to settle debts; "kuhara/chitomero"—pre-arranged future marriage agreements; "bonus wife"—giving a husband a younger sister or niece of his wife as his second wife; and "ukwati wotulira"—a practice where a girl found pregnant is taken by her relatives to the boy's family to force them into marriage. Such practices and traditions perpetuate gender biases that prime girls for marriage. In addition, higher proportion of girls take part in initiation rituals more than boys that include both sexual and non-sexual practices. Traditional sexual initiation rituals are closely related to child marriages as they are often intended to prepare children for adulthood but may also involve teen forced and unprotected sexual intercourse. However, two thirds of the respondents in the study (University of Zurich et al. 2019) consider these practices as valuable.

The report on evaluation of the NSECM found that some harmful practices and norms are no longer practised or have been modified. However, meaningful change in norms has been limited because the approaches did not address the entrenched cultural value systems that are root causes of child marriage. These harmful practices are perpetuated by initiators, counsellors, and chiefs as they financially benefit or in kind (MoGCDSW, 2022; Munthali & Kok, 2018). In addition, good practices have been poorly documented hence affecting replicability potential. There is therefore a need for novel interventions as deeply entrenched harmful norms that glorify child marriage still prevail.

1.1.2.3 Peer Pressure and Social Norms

The desire to conform to societal and peer expectations leads to child marriages among girls. It so happens that most of the girls in the village are married. Social norms that prioritise marriage and motherhood over individual aspirations have been passed on to girls by their married peers to influence their decisions (UNICEF, 2018). Girls may internalise the belief that marriage is their primary role and purpose. In addition, girls also lack voice in the decision-making processes involving their lives hence they are pressured into marriage.

1.1.2.4 Weak Legal Enforcement

Despite having laws that set the minimum age for marriage at 18, Malawi struggles with weak enforcement (Plan International, 2016). Families and communities often face no consequences for arranging such marriages, allowing the practice to persist. There is also fear of retribution stops people intervening or reporting child marriages. There is inadequate knowledge of the law on the part of parents, traditional leaders, religious leaders, and all those who are involved in the process. Even in situations they know the law, most people in the rural areas do not know the ages of children so they just measure by physical maturity. Where cases of child marriages have been taken to law enforcement agencies such as the police and courts, delays in dealing and concluding such cases decreases trust among communities in law enforcement agencies (Bantwana, 2019).

In addition, other factors include limited access to financial and human resources by the justice system, long distances to courts, lack of witness protection mechanisms and absence of birth registration documents to determine legal age.

1.1.2.5 Teen Pregnancy and Sexual Exploitation

The adolescent girl is vulnerable to sexual exploitation that can often lead to teen pregnancy and in turn result in coerced unions. Malawi Demographic Health Survey (MDHS, 2016) reports that 29% of women aged 15-19 have begun childbearing. Teenage pregnancies contribute to a rise in cases of child-to-child marriages. This is in addition to child marriages an older male and a younger female.

1.1.2.6 Low Education Levels

Low education levels exacerbate child marriages. Girls with low educational attainment are more likely to be married off in their early teens. When educational opportunities are scarce, girls are at greater risk of becoming child brides. High repetition rates in primary school often forces girls to drop out of school and contribute to child marriages. Boys who drop-out of school and earn income are also at high risk of entering into a child marriage. 52% of women who were married before the age of 18 have none or only pre-primary education and 16% of men who were married before the age of 18 have none or only pre-primary education (Girls not Brides, 2018).

1.1.2.7 Humanitarian Crises

Natural disasters

Humanitarian crises intensify existing vulnerabilities relating to poverty, health, and gender inequality. This is because they disproportionately effect already vulnerable communities and populations. Frequent climatic changes including droughts, floods, unstable rainfall patterns, and cyclones; and pandemics exacerbate the struggles of those already facing barriers to education and sexual and reproductive health rights, particularly girls in emergency settings. Natural disasters and pandemics can strain the socio-economic fabric of families, sometimes compelling children to engage in transactional sex, leading to teenage pregnancies and child marriages as they strive to support their families.

Disease outbreaks

Disease outbreaks such as COVID-19 disrupted the gains made in reducing child marriages as evidenced by an increased reported cases of child marriage from 1,969 in 2018 to 20,109 in 2020; and teen pregnancies to 44,178 (MoGCDSW, 2020). Cases decreased to 5,843 in 2021, indicating the strong influence of COVID-19 on the spike of child marriages and awareness campaigns which followed.

Other drivers include a desire to start a family; to be independent from the parents and the desire to spend time with a partner (University of Zurich et al. 2019).

1.1.3 2019-2023 NSECM Implementation Gaps

The review of the 2019-2023 National Strategy on ending Child Marriage revealed several critical gaps that need to be addressed if the gains that have been registered during its implementation are to be sustained. These gaps include the following:

Cultural Norms and Practices

- Meaningful change in norms has been limited because the approaches did not address the entrenched cultural value systems that happen to be the root causes.
- While there were reports of progress on modifying harmful cultural norms, meaningful norms change has been limited due to superficial norms change approaches that do not address the entrenched cultural value systems. In addition, good practices have been poorly documented hence affecting replicability potential.

Laws and Access to Justice

- Justice for survivors and punishment for perpetrators were also impeded by age-cheating, suspected bribery, and survivors/witnesses failing to appear for court sessions due to their inability to afford transport fares.
- Access to justice for survivors and punishment for perpetrators is also limited by programmatic efforts that are more focused on social issues of withdrawing children from child marriage, than on tracking ECM cases and supporting the pursuit of justice for survivors.
- Despite the existence of laws on ECM and some notable efforts to enforce them, justice was not easily accessible to all. The key gaps included inadequate public awareness of the laws and policies more particularly in the rural areas, weak enforcement mechanisms and limited resources affecting the pace and scale of enforcement of the laws and policies.
- Many people have been reached with the message that child marriage is a harmful practice and criminal. Nonetheless, many more, particularly in hard-to-reach areas, remain unreached.
- The ECM laws in Malawi establish an offence of forcing a person into child marriage or to be betrothed. Also, the laws provide for persons who are not below the age of 18 to get married but do not establish an offence related to child marriage if persons below 18 get married and if there is no evidence of coercion in the child marriage.

Data and Systems

- Data on key ECM components are unconsolidated, leading to challenges in accurately assessing trends and implementing targeted interventions. The Child Protection Information Management System (CPIMS,) which was designed to monitor child rights abuses, including child marriage, is operational in 13 districts, and there were constraints in expanding it due to limited funding. Further, M&E practices vary among stakeholders, with some having dedicated units and systems for internal learning, but external dissemination and lesson-sharing were limited.

Coordination and Resources

- The strategy did not have adequate mechanisms to hold stakeholders accountable.
- There was a limited commitment to disclose funding information.
- The Ministry reported that it was not provided with adequate resources to coordinate NSECM.

1.2 Linkages with Legal and Policy Frameworks

1.2.1 International and Regional Frameworks

1.2.1.1 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)

The agenda 2030 recognizes the need to eliminate child marriages to achieve gender equality and empowerment of women and girls. Sustainable Development Goal 5 target 5.3 specifically calls for the elimination of child marriage, emphasizing the interconnectedness of development goals. By addressing child marriages, Malawi contributes not only to the well-being of its children but also to the broader global agenda for sustainable development.

1.2.1.2 The Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC)

Malawi's commitment to the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) is deeply entrenched in its legal and policy frameworks, specifically drawing inspiration from CRC Article 24. This article explicitly recognizes the right of the child to be protected from traditional practices that are prejudicial to their health and development. In response, Malawi has implemented a multifaceted approach, incorporating CRC principles into its legal landscape. By aligning its legal framework with the CRC, the strategy demonstrates a commitment to ensuring the rights, well-being, and future of children in Malawi.

1.2.1.3 The Convention on Elimination of All forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW)

Malawi is a party to the Convention on the Elimination of All forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW). Notably within Articles 5 and 16, the CEDAW advocates for the elimination of harmful cultural practices and discrimination against women and girls in all its forms, including child marriages. Being a party to the CEDAW, Malawi paves way to address critical root causes of child marriages through this strategy.

1.2.1.4 SADC Model Law on Eradicating Child Marriage and Protecting Children already in unions.

The Model Law on Eradicating Child Marriage and Protecting Children already in Marriage provides a common framework for lawmakers, policymakers, service providers and civil society to end child marriage and protect children already in marriage. It aims at harmonising national legislation, policies, strategies, and programmes with relevant regional and international instruments related to the empowerment of women and girls to eliminate discrimination and to achieve gender equality and equity. This strategy directly aligns to the provisions within the SADC Model Law.

1.2.1.5 Family Planning (FP) 2030 Commitments

FP 2030 is a global partnership that aims to empower women and girls by investing in rights-based family planning programs. Government of Malawi FP 2030 commitment 6 emphasised on the need to address socio-cultural practices and end child marriages by 2030. The strategy provides for a more integrated and coordinated effort towards eradicating child marriage in Malawi.

1.2.2 National Legal and Policy Frameworks

1.2.2.1 The Constitution of Malawi

Section 20(1) of the constitution explicitly articulates the state's obligation to protect children from exploitation and harmful cultural practices. In addition, section 13 reaffirms the commitment to non-discrimination, emphasising the equal protection of all children. This provision serves as the cornerstone for subsequent legal measures, policies and strategies aimed at eradicating child marriage.

1.2.2.2 Childcare, Protection and Justice Act (CCPJA)

The CCPJA is a comprehensive legal instrument for addressing child protection issues, including child marriage. It localises the provisions of the CRC and other international legal frameworks on the protection of child rights. Section 81 of the CCPJA prohibits child marriage, setting the stage for a robust legal response.

1.2.2.3 MW2063 and its First Ten (10) Year Implementation Plan (MIP-1)

MW 2063 recognizes and protects the rights of our children and future generations by ensuring that the decisions we make and actions we take, are not made or taken to their detriment. It further commits to ensure that children are fully supported and protected by the law and the requisite social services that enable them to live and grow to their full potential. The Gender Equality outcome area under Human Capital Enabler in MIP-1 attains to enforce laws that protect the rights of women, girls, boys, and men against all forms of violence and laws to end child marriage.

1.2.2.4 National Children Policy

The Policy commits to protect children from child marriages by establishing a protective environment for children. This strategy forms an implementation framework for National Children Policy.

1.2.2.5 Other Child Related Laws and Policies

There are several child related laws and policies that promote the eradication of child marriages in the country. The key child related laws include Gender Equality Act; Prevention of Domestic Violence Act; Prevention of Trafficking in Person Act; Marriage Divorce and Family Relations Act and Education Act. On the other hand, some of the policies include National Sexual Reproductive Health and Rights Policy; Re-admission Policy; National Population Policy; National Social Welfare Policy; National Gender Policy; National Education Policy, National Youth Policy. Strategies that are critical are as follows: The National Child Protection Strategy (2022-2026), NPA for Vulnerable Children (2022-2026), National Strategy on Adolescent Girls and Young Women; and Youth Friendly Health Services Strategy; National Male Engagement Strategy on Gender Equality, Gender Based Violence (GBV), HIV and AIDS and Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights (SRHR).

On the overall, the legal, policy framework in Malawi is generally strong. What is inadequate is enforcement and implementation.

02 Strategic Direction

2.1 Goal

To reduce the prevalence of child marriage from 37.7% to 20% by 2030.

2.2 Guiding Principles

Implementation of this Strategy will be guided by the following principles:

- i. Child Centred: Implementation of the strategy positions the child at the centre to promote the best interests and development of the child.
- ii. Gender Transformative Approaches: Interventions address and change the underlying social norms, behaviours, and power dynamics that perpetuate gender inequalities.
- iii. Multi-sectoral Approach: Strategies and interventions leverages on expertise, knowledge, skills, and engagement of different stakeholders across all levels.
- iv. Human rights-based Approach: Ensures that human rights are promoted, protected, and upheld.
- v. Transparency and Accountability: Implementation aligns and complies to prevailing laws, policies, and guidelines.
- vi. Evidence Based: Integrates research, data, and use of verifiable evidence to inform decision making.
- vii. Community Ownership: Meaningful involvement and participation of individuals particularly beneficiaries and communities in designing, planning, implementation, monitoring, and evaluation of ECM interventions.
- viii. Inclusivity and Non-discrimination: Accounts for broader needs of the child, family, and community irrespective of their age, sex, disability status, religion, ethnicity, location, and economic status.
- ix. Child's right to participation: Children shall be given the opportunity to voice opinions in all matters that concern them depending on their age and maturity, and to participate in solutions to ending child marriage as agents of change. Empowering adolescents (especially girls) enhances their ability make decisions about their own lives and creates an enabling environment for consulting with other children and adolescents, and wider society.
- x. Sustainability: Including the humanitarian-development-peace nexus approach

1.3 Objectives

- i. To transform norms and promote social and behaviour change in cultural norms, attitudes, beliefs, and behaviours that perpetuate child marriage.
- ii. To increase access to quality, equitable, and relevant education.
- iii. To reduce Vulnerabilities to prevent ECM
- iv. To support economic empowerment and livelihood for girls and boys, their families, and communities.
- v. To promote access to comprehensive information and services for adolescent Sexual and Reproductive Health Rights (SRHR).
- vi. To strengthen ECM System in multi-sectoral coordination, implementation, and monitoring of ending child marriage programmes.
- vii. To enhance ECM response mechanisms to mobilise human and financial resources

2.4 Theory of Change

The Theory of Change (TOC) depicts strategic interventions anticipated to contribute to the overall goal of reducing child marriage from 38% to 20% in 2030. The implementation of this Strategy will also result into other outcomes such as empowered communities capable of addressing harmful practices and norms, reduced school dropout rates, improved school retention and improved knowledge of SRHR knowledges and uptake of contraceptives. The successful implementation of this Strategy will depend on Government and stakeholders mobilising adequate financial resources, closing the existing human resource gaps, capacitating human resource accordingly and undertaking a comprehensive awareness campaign on the disadvantages of child marriage. It is an outcome-based framework that provides a comprehensive understanding of which interventions are likely to contribute to the desired impact or change. The current program's main target group is the girl child and applies a life-course approach of a 12-year-old girl in cognizance of the fact that she will have different and changing needs throughout her teen years some of which might precipitate the risks of getting married while still a child. This reflects the program's focus on leaving no one behind and by targeting the furthest behind first in achieving the results.

This TOC supports the realization of the goal by prioritizing six interconnected, transformative and girl child-centered results. The interconnected nature of the six result areas is expected to contribute to the achievement of universal access to various services particularly sexual and reproductive health and rights, which in turn would ultimately lead to continued education and poverty reduction dividends. When 12-year-old girl child is supported to exercise her rights to, stay in school and access essential sexual and reproductive health services, child marriage and childbearing decreases. In addition, ECM is a health, economic and development issue that is also a manifestation of various forms of policy, economic, administrative and social discrimination against the girl child and gender-based violence. The following is a schematic elucidation of the six focus areas and outcomes:

Key Result Areas and Interventions

This section outlines the Key Result Areas and Key Interventions that are set to achieve the objectives and contribute to the goal of this strategy. The strategy has eight (8) result areas comprising of the following: Deconstruct harmful cultural practices; Keeping boys and girls in school; Livelihoods and Economic Empowerment; Comprehensive Knowledge and Access to Services for Adolescent Sexual and Reproductive Health; Legal and Policy Environment; Child Protection Services; Coordination; and Resource Mobilisation.

- KRA 1. Deconstruct Harmful Cultural Norms: underscores the role of the community as gatekeepers of culture and traditions to address harmful cultural norms and practices. As such, engagement and empowerment of community structures will support interventions for ending child marriages and deconstruct harmful cultural norms.
- KRA 2. Keeping boys and girls in school: Economic Impact of Child Marriage report by World Bank, 2017 suggest that increasing girls' education is one of the best ways to avoid child marriage. Each year of secondary education may reduce the likelihood of marrying as a child or having a first child before the age of 18 by six percentage points.
- KRA3. Sustainable Livelihoods and Economic Empowerment: Poverty significantly contributes to child marriage. Implementing economic empowerment programs can mitigate poverty-related risks that lead to child marriages for both boys and girls. Additionally, such programs can enable families to better support the education of their children and provide the children with other necessities.
- KRA 4. Comprehensive Knowledge and Access to Services for Adolescent Sexual and Reproductive Health: Limited knowledge about sexual and reproductive health often leads to teen and unplanned sex and teenage pregnancies. Improving access to these services and resources will reduce teen pregnancies, promote healthier outcomes, empower youth, support gender equality, and strengthen communities.
- KRA 5. Legal and Policy Environment: Strengthened and enforced legal and policy environment prohibits child marriage, safeguards the rights of girls and boys, protects them from violence, and promotes the right to access justice. The success of these laws and policies depends on how well they are implemented, enforced, and monitored to address the gaps of weak enforcement.
- KRA 6. Child Protection Services: Improving access of child protection services for GBV survivors and children play a crucial role in ending child marriage by addressing root causes, vulnerabilities, and support for affected children.
- KRA 7. Coordination, Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning: Prioritisation of coordination and collaboration among stakeholders and sectors ensures sharing of information, resources, and expertise to promote synergies that effectively contribute towards achievement of the shared goal. Strengthening coordination structures at national and the sub-national levels is therefore critical. Further, promoting research, data management and sharing, monitoring and evaluation will improve evidence-based decision making.

- KRA 8. Resource Mobilisation: Limited financial and human resources have slowed down implementation of interventions for ending child marriage. Therefore, attainment of the desired results and outcomes require innovative financing and resource management.

Each Key Result Area will have specific objectives, specific outcomes and strategic interventions and activities outlined in the table 1.

Table 1: Key Result Area and Strategic Interventions

4.2 Monitoring and Evaluation Framework

A monitoring and evaluation framework has been developed to easily track the overall implementation of the NSECM. It includes indicators and targets to check progress and document best practices. The MoGCDSW will also work with other Government MDAs in order to access independent data systems such as the Education Management Information System, DHIS2, DHAMIS and youth management information system to track cases of child labour. The MoGCDSW will also rely on reports on child marriage from District Social Welfare Officers, District Youth Offices and CSOs. National surveys such as MDHS and MICS conducted by the National Statistical Office will be used to determine prevalence of child marriage.
